PALLIATIVE CARE IN NEW ZEALAND

A challenge in today's time is the transient nature of people. Sitting alongside of that is the challenge of finding the appropriate people to discuss ongoing supports for those people we are working with.

Though a number of resources are available on the Web (or in paper form) – not all of them are up to date or in fact related to the information required.

The following information identifies the geographical area covered by the named DHB, the NASC's related to that area, and finally the hospices located within that community.

Our aim is to provide you with information about resources in New Zealand that may be able to support our palliative patients as they travel throughout the country. In a number of areas, NASC and in-patient hospices work together to provide the ongoing support required for our patients. Other areas do not have inpatient hospices per se, but are supported by hospice volunteers and DHB palliative community nursing.

Whatever the composition, each area provides the necessary support to allow patients to live their lives to the fullest whilst providing ongoing supports to their families.

The information included in this document was sourced from the following websites and verified by the various organisations listed:

Otago Community Hospice provides specialist palliative care to people with life limiting illness in the Otago region.

The hospice's community palliative care team works in Dunedin and around north, central and south/west Otago.

Otago Community Hospice works closely with rural hospitals in meeting the needs of people and their carers in rural Otago.
